Jump Start Your Career in January with Continuing Ed Classes

Multiple programs offer students opportunity to advance careers

(MACON, Ga) - Helms Continuing Education, presented by Goodwill of Middle Georgia, is enrolling students now for January programs in phlebotomy certification prep, certified nursing assistant, basic custodial technician and forklift training.

Classes will be offered days or evenings on an ongoing basis based on student demand.

“The continuing education programs provide stackable credentials for students seeking new career paths or ways to move up in their current positions,” said James K. Stiff, president of Goodwill of Middle Georgia, Inc. “Traditional students in search of experiential learning opportunities, as well as students seeking ways to overcome barriers to employment, will find our continuing education programs provide excellent opportunities to advance their career objectives.”

The Macon campus is located at 240 Broadway, and potential students are encouraged to visit www.helmscontinuingeducation.com or call 478.703.0450 for more information.
